INTEREST OF AMICI CURIAE<sup>1</sup>

The Immigration Reform Law Institute (“IRLI”) is a non-profit 501(c)(3) public interest law firm dedicated to litigating immigration-related cases on behalf of, and in the interests of, United States citizens and lawful permanent residents, and also to assisting courts in understanding and accurately applying federal immigration law. IRLI has litigated or filed amicus curiae briefs in a wide variety of cases, including Wash. All. of Tech. Workers v. U.S. Dep’t of Homeland Sec., 74 F. Supp. 3d 247 (D.D.C. 2014); Save Jobs USA v. U.S. Dep’t of Homeland Sec., No. 16-5287 (D.C. Cir. filed Sept. 28, 2016); Matter of Silva-Trevino, 26 I&N Dec. 826 (BIA 2016); Matter of C—T—L—, 25 I&N Dec. 341 (BIA 2010); and Matter of Q—T—M—T—, 21 I&N Dec. 639 (BIA 1996).

SUMMARY OF THE ARGUMENT

The district court committed legal error by misapplying the burden of proof. Instead of holding the moving party, Plaintiffs-Appellees, to the applicable preponderance of the evidence standard, the district court faulted the non-moving party—the government—for failing to show that its policy of housing class members in hotels for a temporary period in response to the COVID-19 pandemic and in compliance with the Closure Order of the Centers for Disease Control (“CDC”) is safer than immediately transferring class members to licensed facilities. Because of this pervasive legal error, the Court should reverse the judgment of the district court.

ARGUMENT

The District Court Committed Legal Error By Placing The Burden Of Proof On The Government

This Court reviews a district court’s grant or denial of a motion to enforce a settlement agreement for abuse of discretion. Wilcox v. Arpaio, 753 F.3d 872, 875 (9th Cir. 2014). Under this deferential standard, the Court will affirm the district court absent “an error of law or clearly erroneous findings of fact.” Id. at 875. Questions of law, including the interpretation of a settlement agreement, are reviewed de novo. Parsons v. Ryan, 949 F.3d 443, 453 (9th Cir. 2020). Under California law, the plain meaning of the settlement’s terms govern. See Navarro v. Mukasey, 518 F.3d 729, 734 (9th Cir. 2008). Where contract language is susceptible to multiple interpretations, however, courts attempt to discern which interpretation the parties intended. See id. (citing Cal. Civil Code § 1636 (“A contract must be so interpreted as to give effect to the mutual intention of the parties as it existed at the time of contracting, so far as the same is ascertainable and lawful.”)); and § 1641 (“The whole of a contract is to be taken together, so as to give effect to every part, if reasonably practicable, each clause helping to interpret the other.”)).

Although the district court purported to apply the preponderance of the evidence standard to Plaintiffs-Appellees’ motion to enforce the Flores Settlement Agreement (“Agreement”), the district court’s findings show that the court placed the burden on the Defendants-Appellants to show that briefly detaining alien minors in hotels was safer than placing them in the congregate settings at Office of Refugee Resettlement licensed facilities in contradiction to the CDC Closure Order. See Excerpts of Record (“ER”) 4 (citing Flores v. Sessions, 394 F. Supp. 3d 1041, 1048-50 (C.D. Cal. 2017) (apply the preponderance of the evidence standard to Plaintiffs’ motion to enforce); Flores v. Johnson, 212 F. Supp. 3d 864, 869-70 (C.D. Cal. 2015) (same)). Instead of assessing whether Plaintiffs-Appellees met their burden of showing that the Department of Homeland Security had breached its obligations under the Agreement or that the government’s practice of temporarily housing class members in hotel rooms in order to quell the spread of COVID-19 is an unacceptable interpretation of the emergency exception to the 3-day rule, the district court focused on the general rule that class members should be transferred to a licensed ORR facility within three days and faulted the government for failing to show how housing class members in hotels would be safer than those transferred to a licensed facility. See ER 16-17 (faulting the government for failing to show that hotels are safer than licensed facilities).

The district court repeatedly made the error of placing the burden on the government to show that its policy of housing class members in hotels in response to the CDC's Closure Order was more effective at containing the spread of COVID-19 or generally safer for class members and the general public, rather than properly placing the burden on the moving party to show that the practice constitutes a breach of the Agreement (including the emergency exception to the 3-day rule). For instance, the district court faulted the government for "fail[ing] to demonstrate how hotels, which are otherwise open to the public and have unlicensed staff coming in and out [and are] located in areas with high incidence of COVID-19, are any better for protecting public health than licensed facilities would be."<sup>2</sup> ER 10; see also ER 12 (faulting the government for failing "to show how diverting children to hotels, rather than immediately sending them to licensed facilities in the same region with ample accommodations, in any way expedites the process"). Tellingly, the district court did not conclude that Plaintiffs-Appellees demonstrated that the policy of placement in hotels was more dangerous or less effective at containing the spread of COVID-19 than immediately transferring all class members to congregate licensed facilities.

<sup>2</sup> In any event, of course, the government did explain how its policy of housing class members in hotels is more effective at controlling the spread of COVID-19 and quarantining potential carriers of the disease than housing class members congregate licensed facilities. See Appellant's Opening Brief at 14-16, 20, 29-34.

Indeed, the district court's burden-shifting was doubly erroneous because the Constitution entrusts the political branches, not the courts, with making health and safety judgments, and those judgments are accordingly entitled to deference by the courts. As Chief Justice Roberts recently observed:

The precise question of when restrictions on particular social activities should be lifted during the pandemic is a dynamic and fact-intensive matter subject to reasonable disagreement. Our Constitution principally entrusts “[t]he safety and the health of the people” to the politically accountable officials of the States “to guard and protect.” Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 38, 25 S. Ct. 358, 49 L. Ed. 643 (1905). When those officials “undertake[ ] to act in areas fraught with medical and scientific uncertainties,” their latitude “must be especially broad.” Marshall v. United States, 414 U. S. 417, 427, 94 S. Ct. 700, 38 L. Ed. 2d 618 (1974). Where those broad limits are not exceeded, they should not be subject to second-guessing by an “unelected federal judiciary,” which lacks the background, competence, and expertise to assess public health and is not accountable to the people. See Garcia v. San Antonio Metropolitan Transit Authority, 469 U. S. 528, 545, 105 S. Ct. 1005, 83 L. Ed. 2d 1016 (1985).

S. Bay United Pentecostal Church v. Newsom, 140 S. Ct. 1613, 1613-14 (2020) (Roberts, C. J., concurring in denial of application for injunctive relief).

In sum, the record reflects that the district court erred by placing the burden on the non-moving government party to show that its policy of housing class members in hotels pending expulsion under the CDC's Closure Order was safer and more expeditious than transferring class members to congregate licensed facilities in contradiction to the CDC's Closure Order. This error constitutes a legal error and an abuse of discretion. Accordingly, the Court should reverse the district court's orders.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the judgment of the district court should be reversed.
